What is WWPHacks?

WWPHacks is a hackathon - a collaborative programming competition where teams of up to four work against the clock to build innovative technological solutions to real world problems.

Participants will have 24 hours to communicate and work on their project with their team, with the opportunity to participate in numerous workshops and mini-events along the way. Once projects are finished, contestants will submit them for judging. A team of judges will analyze projects based on metrics such as neatness, creativity, and implementation. Interesting prizes will be awarded to winners. At the end of the day, participants will leave the hackathon with technical experience, new friends, and the feeling of fulfillment.

Why should I sponsor

WWPHacks provides the opportunity to get up close and personal with some of the brightest members of the high school hacker community all over the world. We are expecting to bring together 400+ aspiring computer programmers, electrical and mechanical engineers, UI/UX designers, and biomedical engineers, all in the same place. The unique benefit to being a sponsor of WWPHacks is the level of interactivity provided with hackers that is unparalleled anywhere else. Representatives from your business will have access to our event's Discord server, where they will be allowed to personally interact with our hackers through their dedicated voice channels, and be able to participate in all of our events. Through this approach, you'll be able to openly communicate with attendees and showcase your brand in ways never done before.
